As was the case last year, POLO+10 is once again present at the most important tournament in the polo world – the Palermo Open. The feedback from Argentina was overwhelmingly positive last year and reassured that we want to offer a communicative platform for the polo community that also comprises international editions, not just those that focus on European regions. But this is just one aspect of our current plans. Plenty of new countries are just starting to embark on their polo careers, including Kazakhstan and Monaco, and we have devoted some space in this edition to highlighting these countries.

We published the first edition of our POLO+10 magazine at the start of 2004. Back then, we confronted some doubt as some in Germany and Europe did not consider the sport important enough for it to have its own publication. Ten years later, we are all better informed – including the naysayers. For our tenth anniversary, we would like to thank you for your generous support, friendly communication and your many new visions about the sport! POLO+10 has made friends and partners across the world and follows the sport from an unrivalled international perspective. As usual we look forward to your feedback and comments in future and hope you enjoy reading the current issue of POLO+10 World.

When I was asked if I would like to contribute a few words to mark the POLO+10 anniversary, I had two things to say straightforwardly. Of course I'd love to write about a successful company! and 2. ‘What, have you already been on the market for 10 years? The challenges of the media world – which are like walking on hot coals – have not diminished in recent years and yet you have successfully held your own. Your close relationship to the players, sponsors and companies make you unique in the reporting world and you present everything in a high-quality and appealing format. You are one of the few magazines that has been successful at developing and innovating itself. Congratulations on this excellent achievement and I wish you lots of success for the future!’

FINAL OF THE WATSONS AND SPILSBURYS

A total of 20 teams battled it out in four different categories at the South African Championships at the Karkloof Polo Club.

Five Watsons and two Spilsburys were pitted against each other in the final of the South African Championships 2013 for the Beresford Cup. Father Russell Watson (5) played with his son Duncan (5) and nephew Byron (2) in team Mawele. Nephews Lance (+3) and Brett (4) sat in the saddle with the two brothers Gary and Terence Spilsbury (both 4) as part of team Hogspear. The family-oriented final was rounded off by Mike Osborn (4). Although Mawele was the only one of the four teams with a handicap of 16 goals – the other three teams had a handicap of 17 goals – it was able to win against its opponents in the preliminary rounds on Friday and Saturday and also produced an impressive performance in the final against Hogspear.

In team Hogspear, the brothers Brett and Lance Watson produced a particularly sparkling performance, being perfectly attuned to one another: Brett set up the shots while Lance scored the goals. By the end of the match the teams had equalised at 11:11 and it was the number of scored goals that determined the decision: Hogspear had 11 goals to its name, while Mawele had only ten goals because of the goal handicap. And so team Hogspear won the coveted Beresford Cup.

POLO IN BRAZIL

The São José Audi Polo Gold Cup is one of Brazil’s most important tournaments.

Both teams Itanhangá Brasil Insurance and São José Polo-Audi had won all their previous matches when they met in the final of the São José Audi Polo Gold Cup. Right from the start, the quartet Gustavo Garcia (4), William Rodrigues (6), Jose Eduardo Kalil (5) and Guilherme Ribeiro (3) dominated the game and were always a step ahead of Itanhangá Brasil Insurance. Their victory was never in doubt and São José Polo-Audi secured one of the most coveted trophies in Brazil with a 14:10 triumph. Sylvinho Coutinho (4), Aluisio Villela (7), João Paulo Gamon (8) and Igor Pinheiro (3) had to be content with second place. The São José Audi Polo Gold Cup is one of the highest handicapped competitions in Brazil.

TAPING IN POLO – FACT OR FICTION?

Does taping ensure more strength, less pain, greater precision and quicker healing following competitions? Dr. Andreas Krüger from Zurich explains.

Medical science finds it difficult to prove the positive effect of elastic taping for muscle, tendon and ligament injuries. Injuries such as these are common, particularly in polo and especially in the arm used for hitting. In addition duels and falls can cause soft tissue injuries. Back problems during tough battles where you are sitting in a position over the pony’s neck that you wouldn’t normally be in take their toll. If applied before matches, tapes can stabilise, stimulate the muscles and later support regeneration – according to the manufacturers anyway. They can also help to reduce the pain from bruises and swelling. In the last chukka, when strength is needed above all else, an upper or forearm tape can influence the well-being of the player. In acute ligamentous injuries a stabilizing tape can relieve the pain and reduce felt instability. Player Andres “LaLa” Laplacette is convinced by the effect: “I injured my back and it was very painful. The tapes really relieved the pain. It seemed like somebody was holding the muscles of my back. I was able to continue playing with no problems. I would have liked tapes all over my body”. Tito Gaudenzi has also used the tapes successfully: “I can fully recommend taping. A simple and very effective solution”. Science doubts it, athletes love it – 1:1.

A new addition to the POLO+10 family: the Federación Mexicana de Polo (FMP) has agreed to become our partner. The association has a long-standing tradition of horse riding and polo in Mexico continues to grow in popularity.

By María Paula Fernández
Charrería is part of Mexico’s culture, tradition and history and is a national sport in Mexico. The matches on horseback originated in the Mexican haciendas where the workers put their skills in riding and lasso throwing to the test.
Between 100 and 650 A.D., Teotihuacán was the dominant cultural, scientific, and military center in Mesoamerica. It has been a UNESCO World Heritage site since 1987.
When one thinks of Mexico, the first things that come to mind are paradise-like landscapes, its people’s ancient, intriguing and interesting ancestors, the Aztecs, who made amazing discoveries in the fields of nature and astrology, and of course the country’s impressive recent economical growth, offering interesting new opportunities. But the land that produced Carlos Gracida, one of the best players of all time, and taught him to ride his first horses has had a deep relationship with horses since the Charros (Mexican cowboys) ruled the land. It was this tradition of riding that developed into an interest in the sport of polo. POLO+10 noticed how this nation was becoming more and more interested in polo and wanted to dig a little deeper to offer its readers an insight into an alternative polo country that readers may not be familiar with.

Charros: a true symbol of authentic “Mexicanness”

There is a genuine reason why Mexicans are so fond of equestrian sports: the Charros. To better understand this term you could compare them to American Cowboys or Argentinian Gauchos. But the Charros are still very different to them. Charrería is part of Mexico’s culture, tradition and history and is a national sport in Mexico. Starting in colonial times, this sport, which has developed into the country’s national sport, was first played by the workers of the great landlords in the region who developed a new equestrian style adapted to the region’s territorial characteristics. The landlords picked up this peculiar sport, and started playing it themselves, adding spectacular embroidered costumes and showing off their wealth. These spectacular horse riders were then called up to join the army and faced several wars with an astonishing brazeness that was complemented by their abilities with the machete, pistol, spear and bow.

By 1930, there was widespread migration to Mexico City and the Charreadía became a sport in its own right with its own rules. Women also take part in the ceremony around the sport: every year, the Charro associations choose a Charra Queen, a young woman belonging to a Charro association whose social function is to open the season or celebrations. And more importantly the Esca- ramuzas, who are amazing horse women, also get on their horses to showcase their astonishing skills whilst wearing the most colourful and beautiful costumes. Ever since its beginnings, the Charreadía has been one of the quintessential symbols of “Mexicanness”. Moreover, the image of the Charro unifies Mexico as it does not distinguish genre, social status or ethnicity. All Mexicans have the same heritage and every year, countless tournaments and shows gather the people of this country together in the form of unique and lively traditional events to celebrate their true spirit.

POLO+10 discovers Mexico

We started by contacting the Federación Mexicana de Polo (FMP) to find out more. Ever since we made that first call, Lic. Guillermo Hayden were the first Mexican medallists in the history of the Olympic Games. At the Berlin games in 1936, the Mexican polo team won the bronze medal. After the 1940s, Mexican polo enjoyed an upsurge in popularity thanks to its promotion by General Brignone of Careyes Polo Club, actively helping us to write this article, giving us an in-depth insight into what is going on across the Atlantic Ocean.

Polo is deeply rooted in the history of Mexican sport. Polo was first introduced to the country by the Escandon y Barron family from Newport in the US in the later part of the 19th century. The first polo club in the country, a polo section in the Mexican Jockey Club, was founded in 1881. It did not take the players long to achieve their first Olympic medal in Paris in 1900, thereby providing their country with one of its first Olympic triumphs. The three Escandon y Barron brothers together with Guillermo Bayden were the first Mexican medallists in the history of the Olympic Games. At the Berlin games in 1936, the Mexican polo team won the bronze medal. After the 1940s, Mexican polo enjoyed an upsurge in popularity thanks to its promotion by General Manuel Avila Camacho, an avid fan of the sport.

There are certainly some remarkable players in Mexico’s polo history, but there are two brothers in particular who have left their mark on polo history worldwide. They are still active players both in Mexico and the US, proving once again that polo is a lifetime sport. The Gracida brothers, Carlos and Guillermo, are two exceptional players who have reached the highest echelons of polo with handicaps of 10 goals. Carlos is considered the best polo player in the history of Mexico and is one of the best players in the world. He has won the coveted Argentine Open five times. He was a member of the second of five teams that won the Open while rated at a team handicap of 40 goals. This was in 1989 and 1990 with La Espadilla. Gracida won the Triple Crown in Argentina in 1994 playing with Ellerstina. He also is the only player in polo history to have won the Grand Slam of Polo (US Open, British Open and the Argentine Open in one calendar year), a feat that he accomplished three times in 1988, 1989 and 1994. But he has even more achievements than that under his belt, including winner of the British Open for ten times and Most Valuable Player in the Argentine Open five times. The Gracidas are also well-known for being top-notch trainers. Carlos has trained celebrities such as Prince William and Prince Harry of England and Queen Elizabeth. It has even stated that Carlos is her favourite polo player. Nowadays, they continue to play at a high level, training several teams all around the world and keeping the Gracida name as a trademark of world class polo.

The fast-growing Mexican polo community

The country hosts high level tournaments that are beautiful events known for their focus on fine detail, such as the Abierto Mexicano de Polo in Mexico City, the Audi Polo Cup and the Copa Agua Alta in Careyes Polo Club and a British Polo Day, which is hosted by a different club every year, all of which attract first-rate polo players. As this country is almost completely surrounded by some of the most beautiful beaches you can find, Mexico makes a perfect choice for those who want to combine polo with a getaway to amazing attractions such as ancient civilization ruins and pyramids, tropical jungles, perfect beaches and cities of historical interest. Visit this polo country, enjoy its paradise-like beaches, discover its rich history, take your family with you to astonish them and get the chance to play world class polo combined with a getaway to Eden. The doors of Mexico are open to the worldwide polo community!
Mexicana de Polo

With the object of cultivating and fomenting the sport of polo in the country, the Mexican Polo Federation is working at full speed and effort.

Guillermo Steta Mondragón, President of the Mexican Polo Federation.

POLO+10 had the opportunity to speak to Lic. Guillermo Steta Mondragón, President of the Federation and a polo player at Tecamac Polo Club. He explained his goals and visions for the future of Mexican polo:

“The polo standards in Mexico are of high quality. Even though we have just 300 registered polo players, we participated in the last world championships and in the championships that took place in Mexico in 2008, we managed to achieve 3rd place. In 2011, we achieved 7th place out of 80 countries that were participating.

The Federación Mexicana de Polo (FMP) is supporting the first polo school in Mexico with the aim of training up-and-coming polo players and encouraging the Mexican Army to return to playing polo as they did in the 1950s and 60s. The FMP coordinates and supports all national and international polo events and we believe that Mexico is an extraordinary polo destination that offers destinations such as beaches, colonial cities, archaeological and cultural areas that have a long-lasting equestrian tradition. Thanks to the good communication and relationships that exist between polo players in Mexico, official tournaments will take place every weekend of the season from October-December 2013 and January-June 2014. The FMP also encourages children and teens to participate in the various junior tournaments in Central and South America. We are certain that Mexico will continue to be in the vanguard of international polo over the coming years.”

• Club de Polo todos los Santos: just across the frontier with the US is located the “gateway to Mexico” – the city of Tijuana – where the club is located.
• Club de Polo Yucatán: the Yucatán peninsula is not only the home of the intriguing ruins from Mayan culture, such as Chichén Itzá, but one can also enjoy world class polo at the Yucatan Polo Club, one of the two polo clubs in Mexico with both grass and sand playing fields, the first one entirely designed by Battro Polo Fields.
It is easy to make the choice to have an idyllic holiday in Costa Careyes. With accommodation ranging from tropical castles and villas to bungalows, all of which present you a different landscape as soon as you step out of the property, Costa Careyes not only offers all year round holiday accommodation, but it is also the ideal place for weddings, parties, art events and of course the sport of polo.

Located on Mexico’s Pacific Coast in the south of Puerto Vallarta, Careyes has been a trendsetting destination for thirty years and has succeeded in retaining its exclusive and unique character. Costa Careyes has also been an ocean residence for many well-known figures, including the late Sir James Goldsmith, whose family’s Cuixmala estate to the south is part of a protected reserve of some 14,000 hectares that is shared with Careyes. The Costa Careyes Polo Club includes two first-rate polo fields, which were developed under the technical consultancy of famous polo field expert Alejandro Battro, ensuring the quality of the premises and stables which house more than 60 horses and employ professional polo coaches on site. At the Costa Careyes Polo Club, which was founded in 1990, games are played four times a week from November to April. In 2008, the Federation of International Polo chose this splendid club to host the practice matches for the World Championship taking place in Mexico City.

Every year, the club hosts the Copa Agua Alta, which is one of the three most important polo tournaments in Mexico and part of the country’s equestrian festival. This means that from 12 to 19 April 2014, Careyes will be the place to be to enjoy quality polo, combined with fun and elegant social events such as opening night dinners in private villas, beach barbecues, a moon party and even broadcasts from the Abierto Argentino in the dreamy landscapes.

HOW DID LA PATRONA START?
As founders and directors, we are both artists and entrepreneurs, but first and foremost we are horse lovers. We have been riding since early childhood when we were first trained in jumping, dressage and other disciplines. Our passion for polo was first nurtured and demonstrated to us by our dearly departed friend Major Hugh Dawnay. As part of his legacy, Major Hugh gave us our start in this beautiful sport and we have been holding fast to the proverbial reins ever since.

HOW DID YOUR PASSION FOR POLO RESULT IN FOUNDING A POLO CLUB?
A track and exhibition polo field with its own state of the art equestrian facilities was built. The success of this venture led us to create a restaurant lounge where night-time matches and horse showing could be enjoyed from the comfort of a modern facility. The name of La Patrona gained prestige in the polo and equestrian sports world because of the high calibre of the horses and also due to the staff’s focus on professionalism. It is both a privilege and part of our thrilling history for us to be able to state that many local and international polo players from all levels were introduced to polo on the fields of La Patrona, a place where we are all on an equal playing field.

NOW YOU HAVE FULLY DEVELOPED THE PLACE, WE KNOW OUR READERS WOULD LOVE TO KNOW MORE...
We are pleased to open the doors to our new facilities and land, the TIERRA TROPICAL POLO, BEACH & JUNGLE ECO RESORT, comprised of 500 acres (of which 4% has been devoted to sustainable development), including 150 stables, grass fields designed and built by Battro and two jumping tracks (sand and grass). We have special breeding paddocks for the foals, as well as an equine clinic with a swimming pool for the rehabilitation of injured horses. In addition, La Patrona also offers a Restaurant and Club House with delicious Mexican cuisine and indoor night entertainment that includes evening games and equestrian shows. It took La Patrona and its owners ten years to realise this dream. We have created a little piece of heaven right here on Earth in the Valley of San Francisco or, as we fondly refer to it, San Pancho. The facility boasts an orchidarium, an exotic bird aviary and a greenhouse with pre-Columbian medicinal plants. Visitors to La Patrona are astounded not only by its magnificent natural beauty, but also because of the quality of our horses. La Patrona has 110 horses, half of which are Arabian thoroughbreds. Today, we are the only polo club in the world with a prestigious stable comprised of Arabian thoroughbreds. Our thoroughbred stallion Song Shan from Kentucky has an incredible character and bloodlines. He is already producing Anglo-Arab horses, one of the finest and most versatile breeds and one of the coveted trademarks of our ranch.

YOU MENTIONED THE HORSES – DOES LA PATRONA CONCENTRATE ON HORSE BREEDING?
La Patrona is a prestigious and important horse-breeding centre in this country for polo and other equestrian disciplines. It has 10 thoroughbred stallions, including Arab, English and Friesian. All of them have an excellent character and are the descendants of champions. We utilise Friesian percherons imported from Holland for driving, thoroughbreds for jumping, Arabians for endurance and polo, and other specialist breeds for vaulting and equinotherapy. Each discipline has its own impeccably-kept stables and attentive, professional staff to attend to the horses’ needs. Everything is situated within easy reach for people who love horses and their sports within a unique environment that is surrounded by its own beaches, rivers, crystal-clear streams and majestic tropical forests next to the lovely Mexican town of San Pancho and the Jaguar Reserve.
SANTA MARIA

A polo gem in Andalusia. The Santa Maria Polo Club in Sotogrande played host to the 2012 European Polo Championship and has long been one of the most important and beautiful polo locations in the world. The international polo elite often comes here.

A seemingly endless strip of land on the coast of Andalucía with no inhabitants and very few people: This picture from the early 1960s has changed somewhat. Today, Sotogrande is one of the most prestigious and luxurious regions in Europe. In 1965, the legendary field “La Playa” was located directly on the beach – the first playing field at the Santa María Polo Club Sotogrande was created with the support of the famous Enrique Zobel, the polo-playing non-conformist, multi-millionaire and foundation founder from the Zobel-Ayala clan. Just two years later in 1967, the first polo match took place in Sotogrande. This first chukka was a very traditional and friendly game on today’s world-renowned playing field “La Playa”.

The “Golden Cup of Sotogrande” was played for the first time in 1971 and is today one of the most important tournaments in Europe. World-famous teams and players have played at the Santa María Polo Club Sotogrande ever since and the 2012 European Championship was hosted here. The venue is currently in talks to host the World Championship 2014. Personalities such as Hap Sharp (James R. Sharp), who won for the first time in 1971 with an international team and repeated his success in 1975 and 1976, have made a considerable contribution to the success of the club. Two years later in 1973, the Silver Cup was established and is still played today. In 2006, Sotogrande achieved a record with 31 teams participating in the Gold Cup and two years later it opened its extended club facilities. Two years later in 2010, additional event facilities were built and opened and then in 2011, the complex celebrated the 40th anniversary of the Gold Cup with the international BMW Polo Tournament.

The prickly summer climate of Ticino, an international line-up of high-quality polo players and the unique backdrop of Ascona make the Polo Cup Ascona on Lake Maggiore one of the most beautiful arena polo events in Europe. Uwe Zimmermann and his team won the Polo Cup for the third time this July – 3,500 guests attended and were captivated. There was also huge interest from the media with six TV broadcasters and various newspapers in attendance.

Event organiser Uwe Zimmermann who won the – quite literally – hotly contested final in temperatures of 35 degrees with his team Styger Partner-Podium Swiss was pleased with the “beautiful, fast-paced and accident-free polo” on all playing days. Team Andermatt Swiss Alps – Bentley Lugano was in second place, while last year’s winner Julius Bär achieved third place against Giordano – Poroli Special Boats.

The highlight of the Ticino polo days in Ascona was the atmospheric Players’ Party on Lake Maggiore which had an Indian theme to honour guests from India. Most of the decoration, such as on the entrance gate, used material shipped directly from Jaipur. Decorative elephants and lamps were contributed by Globus Schweiz, while original Indian food was created by Giordano. Unfortunately the Maharajah of Jaipur had to cancel his attendance at short notice, but a representative from the Indian embassy in Bern as well as the FIP Ambassador for India, Vikram Rathore – who played as team-captain for team Giordano-Poroli – attended. Well-known faces from radio and television have been amongst the fans and visitors to the Polo Cup in Ascona since its very beginnings.

A falcon display on the polo field and firework display in the darkened arena were some of the other highlights of the programme. Uwe Zimmermann: “What we value and look for in all events is a cozy and friendly atmosphere. This is something we saw so successfully created in Ascona and we’re very happy about this.” The little ones also got in the saddle in aid of a charity project in India. On Saturday morning, players met to take part in the traditional parade in the picturesque town of Ascona. Uwe Zimmermann, who has long been known for his international polo visions, still has a lot of plans. One of his new events was the Viareggio Beach Polo Cup in October and 2014 he plans to set up further new polo tournaments in Sweden, Germany and Brazil. www.poloclubascona.com.
Francesco Mitrano has a dream. The Italian polo player and businessman, who lives in Monaco, has always wanted to bring polo to the sparkling kingdom on the Cote d’Azur. In 2013, his dream became reality.
It seemed obvious to me that Monaco was the perfect venue to stage this glamorous and prestigious event. We will be bringing a very high-end sport and supporters to the Principality which will benefit everyone," said Francesco, who has played polo across the world. In Monaco he found the perfect place for polo in Beausoleil, just five minutes away from Monte Carlo. Not an easy task on its own.

The construction of the playing field took place almost overnight – lawns and an infrastructure for horses, players and spectators were created in record time. Gazebos, stands, lodges and tents for VIPs, sponsors and their guests were also built. Many areas in the stadium are reserved for the public, who had free access to attend the matches. "For this first 3-day match in Monaco we had four teams with handicap 6/8, competing for the Missbach Diamond Cup. The players from Italy, France, England and Argentina were all of international standard," when Francesco talks about the preparations for the first polo tournament in Monaco, it sounds almost like a mystery story. After the preparations for the tournament were successfully completed in the shortest possible time, there was a problem: a number of wild pigs descended on the fresh green lawn shortly before the big day at the beginning of August.

An electric fence now separates the hungry wild pigs from the polo complex. "A disaster, we weren’t sure if we could repair the damage in time." But they did not only accomplish this mission, they also managed to get Prince Albert of Monaco as patron for the first polo tournament in Monaco, and he approved the closure of the traditional square in front of the casino for a large parade of polo players in the heart of Monte Carlo. "We are deeply honoured that HSH Prince Albert has given us his High Patronage," says Francesco, President of the Monte-Carlo Polo Club.

As suggested by HSH Prince Albert of Monaco, the Charity Association Ecoute Cancer Réconfort was associated with the Monte-Carlo Polo Tournament. "In 1992 Martine Vaccarezza, Mado Small, Theresa Meneghini and Philippe Ballerio established the Ecoute Cancer Réconfort Association under the Honorary Presidency of HSH Princess Stephanie to provide support and care to people with cancer," says the president of the association, Ms Adeline Garino. Francesco Mitranò wants to continue making his dreams of international polo in Monaco a reality in future. Preparations are already underway for one or even several tournaments in 2014 and together with Benjamin Polledo from Milan he is about to establish a polo school in Monaco.
M. Ahadpur Khangah certainly had an ambitious idea when he began to plan the first professional polo event in Azerbaijan. He has a clear vision of the future of polo in Azerbaijan and plans to build a new polo club with at least two fields. "We have 48 hectares we need to build the club complex. This year, we will set up a national team that will be trained in Argentina as well as here in Baku by professional coaches," he said.

Shortly before the big final on Sunday, the spectators were witness to an historic moment. Two teams, comprising of polo players and chovgan players from Azerbaijan, played a friendly match and combined the old and new version of traditional polo. M. He is very quick to say where he wants to see his polo team in a few years. "The Azerbaijan people have the sport, horses and ambition for competition as the Soviet – and now the country is returning to its traditional roots and passions such as polo, which we have known as chovgan for hundreds of years. Baku is ready to play an important role in the world of polo. And the adventurous spirit of modern Baku suits this game to a tee. Representatives from other sponsors of the first Arena Polo World Cup Azerbaijan are inspired by the polo debut in Baku in cooperation with the respective teams from World Polo and local partners perfectly." He has already organised tournaments all over the world. The three-day tournament was financed by Azerbaijan's food firm Milla and team sponsors Chopard, Bentley, Montblanc and Baltika. World Polo and its local partners Tatyana Sulzenbacher (event organiser from Milla Az FPCo.), Etibar Quliyev (Managing Director Elite Horse Club) and Bahruz Nabiyev (General Secretary ARAF) were responsible for the implementation and organisation of the event. Reto Gaudenzi (World Polo), the polo visionary from Switzerland, organised the major polo debut in Baku in cooperation with the respective teams from World Polo and local partners perfectly. He has shown in an impressive way that Azerbaijan is ready to play the modern version of the fast-paced sport.

Under the motto "Bringing Polo Home", M. Ahadpur Khangah, an Azerbaijani entrepreneur and owner of the title sponsor Milla, has shown in an impressive way that Azerbaijan is ready to play the modern version of the fast-paced sport.

And the weekend proved it: polo has come home to Baku – and Azerbaijan celebrated it in style. A total of 250,000 euros prize money was up for grabs at the Arena Polo World Cup Azerbaijan – much more than any other tournament on the European continent. There's no question about it: this incentive certainly increased the competitiveness of the matches. The enthusiastic spectators (10,000 visitors on three days) supported the teams loudly and saw world-class matches. Baku produced the finest polo. He has already organised tournaments all over the world. The three-day tournament was financed by Azerbaijan's food firm Milla and team sponsors Chopard, Bentley, Montblanc and Baltika. And all the players agreed on one thing: the conditions for playing polo were ideal, on the one hand for the players as they had a perfectly maintained field at their disposal and on the other hand for the visitors as they could follow the matches closely and see each individual move at close quarters. The view of the playing field was perfect as the spectators were sitting on stands directly above the arena.

Representatives from other sponsors of the first Arena Polo World Cup Azerbaijan are inspired by the facility Reto Gaudenzi has created in Baku. Xavier Lasserre, Manager at Chopard Europe, headquartered in Geneva: "We expected decent organisation, but we're very impressed at how perfectly the tournament and programme have been organised".

Chopard presented four Milla Miglia watches to the winning team. "Following this great success, we are very positive about continuing to play a part in the Arena Polo World Cup Azerbaijan," says Lasserre. Richard Caleel, President of the Federation of International Polo (FIP), was also inspired by the polo debut in Baku: "I'm really impressed at the high standard of the whole tournament". There was excitement in the air as the Teams Europe with Thomas Winter (6), Heinrich Durnath (4) and Raul Laplacette (7) and Argentina with Adrian Laplacette (6), Manolo Fernandez Liorente (7) and Agustín Kronhaus (4) took part in the historic final of the Arena Polo World Cup Azerbaijan and the 100,000 euro prize money. Such an exciting final does not come along very often, with both teams chasing goals as though their lives depended on it. The battle for victory ended with an extra chukka and "sudden death". Thomas Winter from Hamburg scored the golden goal for Europe/Baltika. The spectators celebrated the team's success over the excellent players from Team Argentina/Chopard.
The grand opening ceremony took place in Astana on the 4th of June 2012. Supported by “Samruk-Kazyna” National Welfare Fund, the Club united the best Kazakhstani sports clubs under its brand, including “ProTeamAstana” cycling team, “Barys” hockey club, “Astana Dakar Team” rally team, as well as boxers of “Astana Arlans”. Listed among such renowned names of Kazakhstan sports, Kazakhstan Polo Federation seems to be a worthy member of the Presidential Professional Sport Club “Astana” family. According to the head of Kazakhstan Polo Federation, Mr. Daniyar Kikbayev polo became part of the President’s Club not only because of the importance and prestige this sport gained in the world but also because of the encouraging perspectives Kazakhstan has in this sport. “Kazakhstan is historically known as a nomadic nation and horses played a key role in our life. We want to join world polo industry in order to develop the potential we have and provide the possibility for young Kazakhstani people who live in rural areas to improve their social status by competing with Argentinean and British grooms.”, Mr Kikbayev explained.

“At the moment, the process of formation the federation as a unified structure is not completed yet, this is due to the creation of our own sports training facilities and finding coaching staff to work there which means that the federation should be regarded as a promising social and sport project. We have held numerous meetings with regional authorities and sports organizations representatives who have supported the project and expressed their willingness to work in this direction," Mr Kikbayev said. Creation of at least six regional polo clubs and schools, ongoing negotiations with experienced coaches and instructors as well as professional training of polo players are the high-priority tasks for Kazakhstan Polo Federation at the moment.

“As the training process is a crucial issue for us we are going to negotiate with polo clubs abroad in order to train our sportsmen there. However, once we establish our own polo clubs all the training courses will be held in Kazakhstan," Mr. Kikbayev added. The head of the Kazakhstan polo federation expressed his hopes about a good influence the development of polo will have on tourism in Kazakhstan. “We have quite good resort areas where we would like to establish the first polo clubs. Polo players use to be adventurous people who are open for explorations. I am sure we will attract many well-known polo players to try playing polo in the steppes of Kazakhstan and get to know this unique and picturesque country.” Looking back in history, Kazakhs have domesticated horses as far back as approximately four thousand years ago. The legend says that the wild horse was first domesticated by the ancestors of modern Kazakhs. Moreover, in order to ride a horse, the ancient nomads have invented stirrups and the saddle. There are dozens of traditional Kazakh horse games, with deep histories. The rules of the games used to describe the challenges and hardships of nomadic life on the Kazakh land.

One of the most favourites are Bayga and Kokpar. Bayga is a long distance horse riding to demonstrate the stamina of both the horse and the horseman. Kokpar was the main attraction of any important event, like Nauryz, which is also known as the New Year celebrated on March 22nd among Central Asian nations. The main idea of the game is to fend off opponents and carry the beheaded goat carcass into your own goal. It is worthy to note that some historians do not rule out the fact that polo, which is now widely spread in the Western world, has its origins in Central Asia. So that the nomadic past and sufficient human resources seem to be a formula of success Kazakhstan will use on its way to the world of polo.
The Kazakh people paid dearly for their Soviet past. The Semipalatinsk Test Site in eastern Kazakhstan was Moscow’s main nuclear testing ground for decades, with more than 450 nuclear tests conducted over 40 years, casting nuclear fallout across a huge swathe of the Kazakh steppe.

After suffering more than 450 nuclear explosions on their land and inheriting the terrible fruits of that violence—a nuclear treasure chest bigger than the combined arsenals of China, France and the UK at the time—the people of Kazakhstan chose to be an example of humanity rather than cynicism or vengeance.

HOPE FOR THE WORLD

With the disintegration of the Soviet Union in 1991, Kazakhstan came into being, complete with a collapsed economy, but more than 1,400 nuclear warheads plus the delivery systems to use them, a valuable commodity for a new and impoverished nation. Yet under the leadership of President Nursultan Nazarbayev, Kazakhstan chose instead to reach out to the international community and begin, almost from the moment of its independence, the process of ridding the country of all its nuclear warheads over a period of four years. “In the entire world, there is only one politician who is really credible in terms of nuclear disarmament and that’s Nazarbayev,” said the German Ambassador to Kazakhstan Guido Brez earlier this year. “Because he has acted – he has bad nuclear arms and he has given them up completely.”

Not only did Kazakhstan have weapons in its possession, but also nuclear material; in particular, enough poorly stored weapons-grade uranium to make two dozen more nuclear weapons. The existence of this volatile uranium was largely unknown to the international community. However, through Kazakhstan’s efforts with international partners, the dangerous material was quietly safeguarded and removed for downblending and use in peaceful nuclear energy production in the United States.

The Kazakh people have paid dearly for their Soviet arsenal. The 18,500 square kilometre Semipalatinsk Test Site in eastern Kazakhstan was Moscow’s main nuclear testing ground for decades. More than 450 nuclear tests were conducted over 40 years, causing nuclear fallout across a huge swath of the Kazakh steppe. These fireworks came at a terrible price. More than 20 years since the last test was conducted, the people of Semey, as Semipalatinsk is now called, and the surrounding region still suffer from high rates of cancers, other diseases and birth defects, all of which are recurring generation after generation in those who were exposed and now also in their children. Today, the government of Kazakhstan invests in on-going testing of the ground and water to assess what areas might be or become safe for agricultural use in the ecologically shattered region.

From among those who have suffered the most from the era of Soviet testing is one of the heroes of the anti-nuclear-testing and proliferation movement in Kazakhstan, the artist and activist Karipbek Kuyukov. Kuyukov was born in Pervomaisk Village, about 60 miles from the Semipalatinsk Test Site, to parents who used to climb up the hill near their village to better see the beautiful explosions the tests created. Born without arms, his parents sent him away to a special school for disabled children in Russia, hoping he could get prosthetics. But Kuyukov could never get used to the prosthetic arm. He filled his own creative drive was not enough for him. Kuyukov returned to Kazakhstan and in 1989, at age 21, joined the ground-breaking Nevada-Semipalatinsk movement started by Kazakhstan poet Olzhas Suleimenov, who interrupted a televised reading of his poetry to break the news to his countrymen about what was being done in their midst. Two days later, 5,000 people gathered for the first meeting of the movement. Nevada-Semipalatinsk made it its mission to seek an end to nuclear tests at both the Semipalatinsk Test Site and the Nevada Test Site, the United States’ main nuclear testing ground, stop the nuclear arms race, study the human and environmental damage done by the tests and act in solidarity with other anti-nuclear movements. Two years later on 29 August 1991, Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev, bolstered by the voices of that movement and of the desires of his country’s citizens, made the courageous decision to stand up to the still-powerful Soviet government in Moscow and close the Semipalatinsk Test Site. It was the first nuclear test site anywhere on the planet to be closed.

But Nazarbayev and the people of Kazakhstan didn’t stop with their own nation, their own stockpiles and just their own wellbeing. Instead, over the past 20 years, the country has been a major force for anti-nuclear-testing efforts and anti-proliferation measures around the world. Kazakhstan has ratified the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and, in September 1996, became one of the first signatories to the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty. In July 2006, Kazakhstan also became one of the founding members, along with the U.S. and Russia, of the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism. And in September 2006, with Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan created the Central Asian Nuclear Weapons Free Zone (CANWFZ).

In 2009, on Kazakhstan’s initiative, the UN International Day Against Nuclear Tests was established on 29 August, a date chosen to coincide with the Semipalatinsk test site’s 29 August 1949 nuclear test. However, the path from independence toward prosperity has also been a march in support of peace, rational thinking and rapprochement. In addition to its leadership in anti-proliferation treaties and organizations, the country seeks to address the causes of violence, hatred and fear. Kazakhstan convened the Congress of Leaders of World and Traditional Religions for the first time in 2009 to promote dialogue among world religions. The congress now meets at least every five years. This month, it convened to discuss the theme of women and peace. “The Atom Project” is a creative and educational initiative to promote a culture of peace and security. Its overall objective is to enhance cooperation in promoting peace, security and stability in Asia in recognition of that region’s impact on the world. Kazakhstan’s recent peace initiative is The Atom Project (“Absolut Testing, Our Mission”), an international petition campaign launched by President Nazarbayev to unify global opinion against nuclear weapons testing and seek the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty. The initiative hopes to permanently end nuclear testing and ultimately rid the planet of nuclear weapons arsenals.

“When we have an opportunity to once more remind the world about the tragic consequences of nuclear testing, and push the global community towards more decisive actions to achieve a final and definitive ban of such testing”, President Nazarbayev said at the launch of the initiative on 29 August 2012. “Under the project, any human being on Earth who is opposed to nuclear weapons can sign an online petition urging governments of the world to abandon nuclear tests forever and ensure the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty.”

Kuyukov, honorary ambassador of The Atom Project and just one of the many inspiring human beings indelibly marked by nuclear testing, gave an emotional speech to launch the new international initiative. “Let us not repeat the mistakes of the past! I call on all people to help stop nuclear weapons testing around the world! Nuclear test sites must be closed! Let our sky be clean and our children be healthy! I do not have arms to hug all of you and to express my gratitude for your participation in this conference, but I have a heart, and it belongs to you! Let your families live in peace and serenity!”
Kazakhstan has also hosted the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) Forum on Interreligious, Interethnic and Intercultural Understanding, the Common World: Progress Through Diversity Ministerial Conference, which brought together ministers from 65 different nations for inter-citizenship dialogue, and other events promoting peace through understanding. Most recently, Kazakhstan has been the site of talks between global powers and Iran about the latter’s nuclear program, serving as a host and as a moral authority on nuclear issues. In April 2010, on a visit to Ground Zero of the closed Semipalatinsk site, UN Secretary General Ban Ki-Moon spoke about the closure of the site and the decision of the country to voluntarily abandon weapons of mass destruction. “It was a visionary step, a true declaration of independence”, he said. A small population in the middle of an overlooked region had become a source of hope for the world. “Here in Semipalatinsk, I call on all nuclear weapons states to follow suit of Kazakhstan. For inspiration, they can look to Kazakhstan. Kazakhstan has led by example.”

ECONOMY: AN INDEPENDENT ECONOMY THRIVES

After 20 years of hard work at home and abroad, 20 years of President Nursultan Nazarbayev’s multi-vector foreign policy, Kazakhstan has transformed itself from a vast resources warehouse to one of the world’s most dynamic economies. The poverty rate has fallen from more than 45% in 2001 to 5.3% in 2011 and the country’s new Strategy Kazakhstan 2050 programme aims to make Kazakhstan one of the world’s top 30 most developed states by 2050. Per capita income in the country is expected to reach $15,000 in 2016, making it a high-income country by World Bank standards. Kazakhstan’s current development and eye to the future were recently recognised with a victory for its bid to host the international specialist exhibition EXPO 2017 in Astana. With a theme of “Future Energy”, Kazakhstan’s capital is preparing to create the first neighbourhood in the world to embody all the pillars of the third industrial revolution: using renewable energy, using buildings as power plants, using storage technologies to use intermittent energy sources, using the internet to transform the power grid and using plug-in vehicles for transport.

KAZAKHSTAN: RICH HISTORY, MODERN CULTURE

Kazakhstan is a huge country and ways of life differ across its thousands of miles. Though proud of their nomadic heritage, urban Kazakhstan long ago traded horses for horsepower and high-rise apartments with a view of the steppe. In Almaty, Kazakhstan’s largest city, designers including Dolce and Gabbana, Dior, Louis Vuitton, Prada, Zegna and others have come to stay and supply fashion-conscious residents with the brands they’ve come to love and which will get them past the velvet ropes at the city’s most exclusive clubs. Suits and ponytails, high heels and the occasional hijab rub shoulders on the city’s streets. The nation’s cultural heart, nestled under snow-capped mountains, teems with coffee shops, pubs, boutiques and museums, plus hiking, swimming and climbing opportunities and a new world-class ski resort a short drive away.
The idea was actually one that came to Uwe Schröder as he sat in the saddle. “These polo kits are a bit boring really. I wanted my own kit – my own TOM TAILOR polo kit”. His in-house designer didn’t have to be asked twice and the first TOM TAILOR polo kit was soon ready. “You can’t buy them, of course. We made them for our team and private usage”. But it didn’t take long for the demand to grow. At every tournament, the team was besieged with questions on where people could buy the TOM TAILOR polo kits with skull and the catchy Indian battle cry “Hoka Hey – today is a good day to die”. Answer? Nowhere! Much to the disappointment of the fans. But things have now changed and it’s not just its polo collections that the TOM TAILOR Polo Team wants to sell. In accordance with the philosophy of the founder Uwe Schröder (“always think big”), a number of TOM TAILOR polo stores will open their doors in autumn 2014. “For us, this is the next logical step. The brand TOM TAILOR has been linked with polo for years. We will be playing a lot abroad both this and next season. Chantilly, Barcelona and Rome are on the agenda”. TOM TAILOR is also a promoter of polo in Germany. The brand supports up-and-coming talent and suppliers youth polo camps and the German youth team with kits. “As demand for our polo designs goes beyond the polo-going public, we will be able to ensure greater visibility and availability with the new TOM TAILOR polo stores”.

Uwe Schröder is one of the premier proponents of polo in Germany along with his daughters Tahnee and Naomi, as well as Argentinian pros Eduardo and Santos Anca. The coming season sees them enjoy a jam-packed schedule. “We’ll be giving it our all. The girls want to play 12 goal and they’ve become extraordinarily good over the past few years”. For Uwe Schröder, who spends three hours a day training his horses, the unique polo way of life has it all. “When we sit around all muddy on the straw discussing the day after working with the horses, that’s pure happiness for me. Polo is adrenaline and strategy, but also means spending time with international friends. In the winter months, we’ll train in Argentina again and also take our horses to make sure that we stay competitive for the coming season”. The TOM TAILOR Polo Team is at the very heart of polo – and is on the cusp of a new and fashionable era.

After last 2012’s successful première, the All Asia Cup takes place for the second time from 9-18 January 2014. A total of eight teams has signed up and will fight for victory at the VR Sports Club in Bangkok, Thailand.
In 2007, the 24th Southeast Asian Games (SEA Games) took place in Thailand and polo was part of the competition for the first time in its history, with five national teams from Malaysia, Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore and the Philippines officially competing against each other on an inter-Asian level. The tournament was a huge success. Polo has not been part of subsequent SEA Games, but there was still a desire to set up a polo tournament for national teams to compete against each other. Under the direction of Mr Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha, founder and former president of the Thailand Polo Association (TPA), the All Asia Cup was initiated. Four teams from China, India, Thailand and Mongolia came to the launch of the event in Thailand, where the winning team was the quartet from Thailand.

After last year's successful première, the All Asia Cup will take place for the second time from 9-18 January 2014, led by the newly appointed TPA President, Mr Kanoksakdi Bhinsaeng. Eight teams have announced their participation in this year's tournament. As was the case last time, India, China and Mongolia, as well as defending champion Thailand, will take part. Furthermore, Brunei, Indonesia, Korea and the Philippines will also be coming to the VR Sports Club and the Siam Polo Park in Bangkok. In celebration of the 10th anniversary of the Thailand Polo Association in 2014 the All Asia Cup is set to be bigger and better for sponsors. As the All Asia Cup was very well received worldwide, the second edition awaits an increased international visibility. On Saturday, 18 January 2014, the final will be played under the lights and promises to become an outstanding event and social spectacle. Since its inaugural event in 2012, the All Asia Cup has built up a reputation as a fair and transparent tournament. In 2014, the English Senior HPA umpires will once again ensure fair play according to HPA rules. The system of assigning the polo ponies has proved to be particularly successful. The ponies are organised by the Thailand Polo Association and are evenly distributed to all participating teams.

2014 marks the 10th anniversary of the Thailand Polo Association. TPA founder Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha has said, “Since our establishment in the year 2004, Polo in Thailand has developed remarkably, not only from public awareness but also in the skills and ability of the players. TPA has had support from other international clubs and establishments in organizing competitions and tournaments, contributing to the strengthening of relationships and goodwill between other nations and the chance to increase the standard and skills of our athletes.”

HIGH GOAL POLO ENGLAND

The best polo players in the world, highly exciting matches, British charm and royal style – the United Kingdom can look back on an excellent and exciting season. The high goal highlights.

He came, he saw, he conquered – Argentinian 10-goaler Facundo Stirling. Although El Remanso took an early lead, Zacara, part of polo. The high goal tournament in Wind- Lyndon Lea (1), Rodrigo Andrade (8) and Matt Perry (3) gave Pieres was; he scored almost all his team’s goals, while teammates lyndon Lea (1), Rodrigo Andrade (8) and Matt Perry (3) gave him all the support he needed. The Queen’s Cup has been played at the Guards Polo Club since 1968 and the 2013 tournament marks the second time it has been sponsored by Cartier. The high goal tournament in Windor Great Park is score of 10:9 in favour of the English polo season. The Queen’s Cup regularly attracts the best polo players in the world and the team line-up reads like a Who’s Who of polo. This year, a total of 16 teams with team handicaps of 22 goals took part. Seven other players with a 10 goal handicap took part in addition to Facundo Pieres. Zacara’s final opponent El Remanso also had a 10-goaler in their team in the form of David Stirling. Although El Remanso took an early lead, Zacara, par-icularly Facundo Pieres, quickly pulled out all the stops and had the match firmly in its grip by the third chukka. In the end, Zacara beat El Remanso to the top spot with a score of 13:9 and lifted the coveted winners’ trophy from the hands of Queen Elizabeth II.

Just one week later, the high-goal polo party moved on to Mid- hurst, where the Cowdray Park Polo Club played host to the Veuve Clicquot Gold Cup, marking the start of the British Open Polo Championship. Although there were a few small changes and an additional 17th team, the team line-up was almost exactly the same as for the Queen’s Cup. After four exciting weeks, the two finalists were decided. Once again, Zacara rea-ched the final two. This time, Facundo Pieres’ opponent was his own brother Nico Pieres (7), who was in the saddle on behalf of team Dubai, as was 10-goaler Adolfo Cambiaso, who scored the first goal of the match. In the third chukka, Zacara conquered its opponent’s lead for the first time and despite the iron will of team Dubai, it did not give up the lead from then on. Once the chukka bell sounded, the scoreboard showed a score of 11:8 in favour of Zacara. This saw Zacara at the top of the winners’ podium once again after its triumph in the Cartier Queen’s Cup. Facundo Pieres about the success of his team Zacara: “I managed to pro-duce a good performance. From the first match onwards, we knew that Zacara could beat everyone. We won all games in suc-cesion and also won the final of the Queen’s Cup (the second most important tournament) as well as the Open Champion-ship against team Dubai with Cambiaso”. David Woodd, Mana-ging Director of the Hurlingham Polo Association (HPA) also seemed impressed with Zacara’s performance in his brief ana-lysis of the two tournaments: “This year, we were very lucky with the weather. With a few exceptions, the sun shone at most of the high goal tournaments. At Queen’s Cup there were some surprising defeats, such as with the teams La Bamba and Black Bears, from whom we expected a better performance. The semi-final match was perhaps the best match of the season with two of the world’s best players on the field. Facundo Pieres motivated his team – and himself – to produce a world-class performance. Many thought that El Remanso would win the final, just Zacara beat them. Facundo Pieres also put in an exemplary performance in the Gold Cup as player and captain. Team Dubai tried very hard against El Remanso in the semi-final but could not.repeat its performance in the final and was beaten by Zacara. To win both tournaments – the Queen’s Cup and Gold Cup – is a rare and exceptional achievement.”

One of the highest handicapped tournaments in England is the St. James’s Place Gloucestershire Cup with a team handicap of 24 goals to 26 goals. Two teams – El Remanso and Black Bears – took part in the challenge at the end of July at Cirencester Park Polo Club. With his tactical playing, Eduardo Heguy (8) dominated the match and ensured that his team played in a well-coordina-ted way. Even after the end of the first chukka, El Remanso was ahead with 4:5-2 and simply could not be stopped. The Black Bears fought back time and again and were able to catch up a little by the end of the first half to 6.5-5. But luck was not on their side and several missed chances from Ignus du Plessis (8) and John Paul Clarkin (8) for the Black Bears meant that the final score was 10.5:7 in favour of George Hanbury (1), Eduardo Heguy (8), Juan Gris Zavaleta (7) and Joaquin Pallatula (7) from team El Remanso.

The start of the British high goal season is traditionally the Prince of Wales Trophy. Right from the start, the eight teams taking part in the tournament in mid-June gave it their all: the Prince of Wales Trophy is played as a knock-out tournament; there are no preliminary rounds acting as warm-up rounds. Emlor and La Bamba took advantage of the chances that came their way and battled into the final. The final took place on a rainy and windy Saturday at the Royal County of Berkshire Polo Club – as soon as the ball was thrown into play, the heavens opened. But this didn’t affect either of the finalists. After the first two chukkas, La Bamba had a comfortable lead of 7:1. Then Emlor embarked on a phenomenal fight to catch up and managed to equa-lise at 10:10, making it anybody’s game again. The last chukka was hard fought. Goals were scored by both teams, equalising at 12:12 as Emlor was given a 40-yard penalty just eight seconds before the end. Joaquin Pallatula (7) calmly took the penalty – and shot the ball perfectly between the two posts. Before La Bamba even had the chance to react, the chukka bell ended the final and Spencer McCarthy (2), Joaquin Pallatula (7), Nacho Gonzalez (6) and Diego Cavanagh (7) left the field as winners with a score of 13:12.

There have been some changes to dates and playing categories for the coming season, which starts in May 2014. The details are still not completely finalised, but David Woodd is still able to give an overview of next year. “We plan to play the Prince of Wales Trophy as an independent tournament during the final week of the Queen’s Cup. The Warwickshire Cup returns to the 22 goals playing category and its old date between the Queen’s Cup and the Gold Cup but is limited to four teams. This means the tour-nament can be played and finished within a week. Some of the established 22 goal teams will play at a 18 goals level with a new calendar of five tournaments. This promises to be very compe-titive. There are also plans to launch the first inter-club league, the ‘Polo Premier League’, with a team handicap of 14 goals. However, the details are not yet finalised.”

Palermo. Not Sicily, but rather a district in the city of Buenos Aires. It is here that the Club Hipico Militar is located. Of two fields, field one is known affectionately as “The Cathedral” to those passionate lovers of polo. Palermo is to polo as Wimbledon is to tennis or St. Andrews is to golf. It is the site of the most coveted tournament in polo, the Argentine Open. This year will be the 120th year of the tournament. It may come with some unusual surprises.

By John Francis Jackson

Polo may not have originated in Argentina, but it is here that the game has reached its pinnacle. Argentine teams have dominated the sport for the last 80 years, and today Argentina supplies the most talented players in the world. Argentine teams have won the most coveted tournament in polo, the Argentine Open, every year since its inception in 1893 as the River Plate Polo Championship, a name it kept until 1923. It has been played continuously every year since its inception, despite two world wars. Only in 1988, due to an epizootic, was the final played in the following May (1986). There has been only one foreign team that has won this championship. That was in 1932 when Meadow Brook, the 30-goal American team, won. Certainly, non-Argentines have played in and won at the Argentine Open. The most notable was Carlos Gracida of Mexico, who won the Open six times. He was a member of the second of five teams that have won the Open while rated at a team handicap of 40-goals. This was in 1989 and 1990 with La Espadaña. Gracida won the Triple Crown in Argentina in 1994 playing with Ellerstina. He also is the only player in polo history to have won the Grand Slam of Polo (US Open, British Open and the Argentine Open in a calendar year) which he accomplished three times, in 1988, 1989 and 1994. The most dominant team in the history of the Argentine Open was Colonel Suarez, which won the title a total of 25 times. Twenty of those victories were led by perhaps the greatest player in polo history, Juan Carlitos Harriott. So dominant was Harriott and Colonel Suarez that they recorded twenty victories in 22 years (in 23 championships) Harriott had different teammates along the way, including his father, Juan Carlos Harriott for his first seven victories. His regular teammates thereafter were his younger brother Alfredo (13 Open titles), and the brothers Horacio and Alberto Pedro Heguy, with 19 and 17 championships, respectively. This team was the first to be rated at 40-goals (all players carrying a 10-goal handicap, the maximum in polo) in 1975, 1977, 1978, and 1979, their last year playing together.

The 1980’s saw the emergence of two teams that have since shaped the history of Argentine polo. The first was La Espadaña, led by Gonzalo Pieres. This team won a total of six Opens and was the second team to be rated at a 40-goal handicap. The other team of importance was Indios Chapaleufú. They recorded their first championship in 1986, beating the favoured La Espadaña. They did it with three brothers playing who were the sons of Horacio Heguy. The three were the two twins, Gonzalo and Horacito, and younger brother Marcos, alongside Alejandro Garrahan. In 1991, Indios Chapaleufú, replacing Garrahan with their youngest brother, Bautista, won again. They became the first team of four brothers to win this championship, which they repeated in 1992, 1993 and 1995. By 1992, they were the third team to be rated at 40-goals. The 1996 winners, Indios Chapaleufú II, included the three sons of Alfredo Pedro Heguy. All nine Heguys have been rated at 10-goals during their careers.
Meanwhile, during the 1990’s, after La Espadaña had dissolved, their cap- tain, Gonzalo Pieres, was forming a new team. He found two young players in Mariano Aguerre and Adolfo Cambiaso. Both were extremely talented. Gonzalo took Mariano, as a 17-year-old 0 goal handicap player, with him to play in the United States. Later, he combined the talents of Aguerre with that of Adolfo, five years younger than Mariano, to form a new team, Ellerstina. Ellerstina won the Triple Crown tournaments in 1992. By 1994, Ellerstina won the Open, which they repeated in 1997 and 1998. From 1991 through 2001, all the Argentine Open championships were won by either Indios Chapaleufú, Indios Chapaleufú II or Ellerstina. The new millennium saw the emergence of two new teams that have dominated the Open ever since. Adolfo Cambiaso created his own team, La Dolfina. After appearing in the finals of 2000 and 2001, he won in 2002. Mariano Aguerre played for a number of teams, winning the title with Indios Chapaleufú in 2001, replacing Gonzalo Heguy, who died in an auto accident in 2000. The year 2003 saw another four-hoeder combination win the title, with the Novillo Astrada brothers, Javier, Eduardo, Miguel and Ignacio. They won all three of the major Argentine titles that year. The Heguys were back in 2004 as Alfredo Pedro’s sons, Alberto, Ignacio and Eduardo, playing once more for Indios Chapaleufú II, along with Milo Fernández Arana, won the Open. Gonzalo Pieres was not done yet in creating new teams. By now, two of his three sons were old enough, and talented enough, to play at the highest level of competition. They began playing at the Open under the name of Ellerstina, and reached the finals in 2005. Both boys, Gonzalito and Facundo, had their handicaps raised to -10 goals. They were defeated by Cambiaso’s La Dolfina.

La Dolfina went on to win in 2006 and 2007, the last playing against Ellers- tina. Finally, in 2008, Ellerstina beat La Dolfina in the finals. This continued a remarkable rivalry which has not stopped. These two teams have been facing each other in the finals every year since 2007. La Dolfina won in 2009 and 2011. Ellerstina won in 2010 and 2012. The last victory was with the youngest Pieres brother, Nicolas, and Mariano Aguerre, who is the brother-in-law of the three. Their three titles in the finals were decided in a sudden-death overtime. Both La Dolfina and Ellerstina have been rated at 40 goal handicaps. Which brings us to 2013 and a most unusual situation. Of all the players that have competed in the Argentine Open, three players are tied in 8th place for the most wins at nine apiece. Oddly enough, these three are Gonzalo Pieres, Mariano Aguerre and Adolfo Cambiaso. If history repeats itself this year, it is as if for the past six titles, we can expect to see La Dolfina facing Ellerstina in the finals. Cambiaso will be competing against Mariano Aguerre once again. The 8th place tie will be broken. Many believe that Adolfo Cambiaso is the best player ever to have played this game. Although his teams were never as dominant as that of Harriott’s Colonel Suárez, Cambiaso, as a player, domina- tes his opponents and has changed the style of play in polo so that one indivi- dual can offset an entire team’s efforts. This year’s Argentine Open will offer the possibility of seeing history in the making. Palermo, Buenos Aires, is the place to be in November and December.

Out on the Argentine plains, an invasive weed grows wild, named by Alexander von Humbolt as “Pampas Grass” (Cortaderia selloana). It is hard to destroy and even fire does not necessary kill it. It just keeps coming back, year after year. So is it with the career of polo player Mariano Aguerre. He first achieved his 10 goal sta- tus in 1998, lost it, was named a 10 goal handicap player again in 2009 and won three Argentine Opens in a row with La Dolfina (2005, 2006, 2007), slipped back to a 9 goal status, and then, after winning Argentine Open title with Ellerstina in 2012, he was pro- moted back to a 10 goal ranking. With his 9 Argentine Open tit- les, only Adolfo Cambiaso is tied with him for the most Argen- tine Open wins among active players. Seven of those titles he won together with Cambiaso on the same team. Two he has won with different teams (Chapaleuflu 1 in 2001 and Ellerstina in 2012), winning against Cambiaso in both of those finals. Gonzalo Pieres recognized Mariano’s talent early and took the 17 year old 0 goa- ler with him to the United States. Later, in Argentina, Pieres combi- ned Mariano with a very young Adolfo Cambiaso to play on the original Ellerstina team, as both young players made their debut in the Argentine Triple Crown tournaments. They surprised eve- ryone by making it to the Argentine Open Final.

Two years later, in 1994, Ellerstina won the three tournaments that comprised the Triple Crown (Tortugas Open, Hurlingham Open, Argentine Open), becoming only the third team to accomplish this feat. Ellerstina then won the Argentine Open, again in 1997 and 1998. Mariano’s life, both polo and personal, seems to be inextricably linked to the Pieres family. Gonzalo “discovered” him and played on winning teams with him. Last year, in his first attempt together, Mariano and the Novillo Astrada brothers, Javier, Eduardo, playing once more for Indios Chapaleuflu II, won the Open with Gonzalo’s three sons, Gonzalito, Facundo and Nicolás. And, somewhere along the way, Mariano married Gonzalo’s dau- ghter, Tatiana, with which he has three daughters. Argentine polo player Mariano Aguerre. He first achieved his 10 goal sta-

Now, at age 43, Mariano is playing at as high a level as he ever has in his career. With Ellerstina, he won two of the three Triple Crown tournaments last year, and had a successful US season playing for Alegria, winning the 2011 C.V. Whitney Cup, one of the tourna- ments that constitute the US Open. With regards to his breeding program, Mariano’s mate, Machitoes Jackie, was awarded the best Polo Argentino Breed by the Argentine Polo Pony Bree- ders Association, presented to him, after the final of the 109th US Open. It was the first time that the Association ever presented an award at an international competition.

This year he will return to the Argentine tournament season playing again for Ellerstina. In the past eight Argentine Opens eit- her La Dolfina or Ellerstina has won, mainly playing against each other. The chances are good, therefore, that they may meet each other once more in the finals. At present, three players are tied in 8th place for total wins at the Argentine Open. Gonzalo Pieres, Adolfo Cambiaso and Mariano Aguerre. All have 9 wins. If Ellerstina meets La Dolfina in the finals, that tie will be broken. Mariano’s career is still going strong. No one can tell for how much longer he will play a pivotal part in polo tournaments or in horse breeding, but one thing is certain: He is as perennial as the Pampas Grass that thrives on the Argentine steppes. We have yet to have seen the last of him.
The British Polo Day has enjoyed success worldwide since 2009. A total of ten locations in China, Mexico, Singapore, India, the United Arab Emirates, England, France and Germany were on the 2013 agenda. Polo fun galore! Very British and just amazing.
“THE BRITISH POLO DAY VISION HAS BEEN TO CREATE A GLOBAL PLATFORM THAT CELEBRATES POLO, HISTORY, HERITAGE, CULTURE AND TRADE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND OUR HOST NATIONS, AND THAT ACTS AS A CONDUIT FOR THE EXCHANGE OF OPPORTUNITIES, IDEAS AND EXPERIENCES. WE ARE ENDEBTED TO OUR PARTNERS FOR HELPING US TRANSFORM THAT VISION INTO A REALITY AND FOR SUPPORTING US IN CREATING THIS NETWORK OF 10 BRITISH POLO DAYS IN SOME OF THE MOST STUNNING DESTINATIONS AROUND THE WORLD.”

In addition to polo matches, guests also enjoyed an exciting programme of events that could hardly have been more varied. With BPD sponsor Land Rover, they were thrilled with an off-road Land Rover Challenge experience following a hearty Bavarian brunch in the forest. The highlight of the British Polo Day was the elegant black tie dinner in the evening at Schloss Baldern where host Carl-Eugen zu Oettingen-Wallerstein welcomed his guests to a seemingly never-ending table and four-course menu in the Festsaal hall. Tom Hudson, who founded the British Polo Day together with Edward Olver in 2009 and currently realises ten BPDs a year across the world, was visibly impressed. “We have experienced an unforgetable time here and are utterly captivated by the fantastic hosts, lovely relaxed atmosphere, excellent polo and a backdrop that cannot be beaten – this was just amazing.”

The 3rd British Polo Day Singapore, presented by Land Rover, was held at The Singapore Polo Club on Saturday 28th September. The event, attended by around six hundred guests, has rapidly established itself as the paramount polo event for those local residents and British expats who wish to extend the good mood of the F1 weekend with a final gathering around a genuine horsepower based sport that is not less dangerous or exciting. The success of British Polo Day Singapore rested not just on the members and staff at The Singapore Polo Club but also on the support and backing of a range of remarkable partners – Land Rover, The Duxton Hotel, Johnnie Walker Blue Label, Charles Russell, Hackett, Taittinger, Justerini & Brooks, Savills, Princess Yachts, Abercrombie & Kent, Fitteinger, Grosvenor Stationary Company, Pendragon Productions, Jod Home, Billionaire, Petrie PR, Sipsmith, East Imperial, Zaeem Jamal, Amanoora and Bacanala. About the return of British Polo Day to Singapore, His Excellency Anthony Phillips – British High Commissioner to Singapore – said: “In just a few short years British Polo Day has evolved into a fantastic platform for promoting some of the very best of Britain’s luxury brands. At the same time it celebrates the global reach of a sport that, for many, is uniquely associated with Britain and our heritage. BPD itself, and the success it has achieved across the world, shows what hard work, vision, enterprise and drive can do and it was a pleasure to once again support their efforts here in Singapore.”

The inaugural British Polo Day Russia, presented by Land Rover, took place on Saturday 7th September at The Moscow Polo Club. Players from three of Britain’s oldest and most renowned institutions – Eton, Oxford and Cambridge – came together from around the world (India, Great Britain, Dubai, Switzerland and Canada) to play against The Moscow Polo Club and Tseleevo Golf & Polo Club. Regarding the arrival of British Polo Day in Russia, Alex Rodiansko – host of British Polo Day Russia and President of The Moscow Polo Club – said: “A fantastic day for the Moscow Polo Club! The first ever British Polo Day in Russia. I believe this will be an incentive to improve polo in Russia – we look forward to more and even better British Polo Days in our future.”

The aim of British Polo Day is to continue the tradition of playing high quality polo against friends all around the world, while also acting as a platform for British entrepreneurs in emerging markets, giving them them a unique access to the global elite. The founders Edward Olver and Tom Hudson have carried out British Polo Days in 10 different countries with the goal of opening doors and building a network of diplomatic and commercial opportunities to showcase great British brands. Attracting a selection of prestigious sponsors including Land Rover, GAM, Charles Russell, IG Group, Abercrombie & Kent, it has achieved around the world, shows what hard work, vision, enterprise and drive can do and it was a pleasure to once again support their efforts here in Singapore.”

POLO SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Dr. Uwe Seebacher, Austrian representative for polo, founder of A Quechua and president of the players’ and trainers’ association PIPA, is focusing on the sustainable development of polo as a new trendy sport.

INTERVIEW KATRIN LAMENSCHMANN PHOTOGRAPHY A QUECHUA

Dr. Seebacher, what does a Quechua stand for?

At A Quechua, sport is the focus. Our VIPs are the horses. We need to put more focus on the sporting components. Polo means action and has to present itself in a cool, stylish, dynamic and chic way. And it is working, as our tournaments and the ones that get the most press coverage compared to other polo tournaments, including the established ones.

What makes a Quechua tournament so successful?

Friendly local players with similar playing abilities, successful press and PR work, perfect event planning and spectators who enjoy following the matches because the explanations and commentaries make it easy for them to understand, for a change. Emotion, excitement and atmosphere. Arena polo with a much higher level of intensity, moves, and turns is simply spectacular. Don’t get me wrong, I love playing polo on grass passionate. As with any other sport, you have to develop skills and work on them. So it makes little sense for us to start with polo on grass, the Formula 1 of polo. You’re better off starting in the Formula 1000 series. Why do many grass polo enthusiasts spend years at the same level and come off second-best compared to arena polo players in terms of technical development? Because as a beginner or when you are making your way through the ranks in grass polo, you spend less time coming in touch with the ball compared to a player who trains in and plays arena polo intensively. We’re often laughed at, but the developments, our strong brand partners and success of our players clearly prove we’re on the right track.

What is your vision and aims with a Quechua?

With A Quechua and the PIPA Association, which is now represented in six countries after just two years, I want to make a responsible contribution in turning polo into a trendy sport. Our international events help with this. The international tournament series starts with the International Beach Polo European Championship in Lignano (www.beach-polo.org) and the Sainte Polo European Championship Tour which is already played in San Candido, Italy (www.snowpolo.it), Austria (www.snowpolo.at) and a completely new polo country. The Tour is no longer played following its cancellation in 2012 and an unsuitable playing field in 2013 – too dangerous for the horses and lack of guarantee that it will be prepared professionally. The number of new requests we have received mean that we will be organising a PIPA ProAm Tour for 2014/15 with betting and much more. And it is this that leads them to polo. Our products – they also buy our history of elegance, lifestyle, action and work and we need to work with upcoming trainers. Teaching and training methods are always important for player improvement. Patrun polo is fun but having tourists on the field does not contribute much to the sport in the long run. In other words, just because all Austrians can ski does not mean that we are all good at teaching it. Just because someone has a South American passport or can hit the ball is no guarantee that he or she is also a good trainer, methodology or educator – on the contrary! A good skier is not necessarily always a good ski coach. An important component of sustainable development is well-equipped training centres. We are currently in the process of building a network of polo villages and resorts – all-year-round facilities that will teach the sport using A Quechua specialists knowledge via certified PIPA instructors. Our training centre prototype in Kamberg near Graz (www.aquechua-kumberg.com) already attracts clients from various different countries to its beginner, tactics and tournament preparation courses. The training centre will set up international standards in many aspects. We will gradually apply this concept to new locations. Over the next year, we will start up in Liechtenstein with a friendly team and will train and certify a young English professional via PIPA. For investors and interested parties, this village concept offers long-term attractive and profitable opportunities in the real estate sector. Chacras – houses with large rooms in South American/Italian style – can be bought in various sizes either as an investment, for your own usage or to let. A Quechua takes care of the management. And as an owner, you are also entitled to stable some of your ponies here, enabling you to play regularly and holiday here. They will be looked after and trained by qualified and specialized staff as part of a full-service package. There are also horses in the A Quechua pool ranked according to the four performance categories and precisely typed thanks to special pony profiling.

We have also developed trainer training courses with PIPA and sports scientists that go far beyond current standards. Our A Quechua polo book series has become an international benchmark. The first in the series is the best-selling beginner’s book. The fourth book “The smart match” will be published shortly and we have received excellent reviews from our test readers.

A Quechua is a story that is being written by more and more people as time goes by. Over the past few weeks, we have recruited around ten new employees. People do not just buy our products – they also buy our history of elegance, lifestyle, action and much more. And it is this that leads them to polo. Our product portfolio now comprises everything related to polo. We are proud to be the suppliers of the world’s only “authentic” polo watch with a chukka timer that lights up at the 7 minute and 30 second point and a good counter on the bezel for quick and easy counting when things get lively. The CEO of Jacques Lemans, Alfred Riedel, has also supplied us exclusively with 100 high-quality ETA Valjoux 7750 watches – connoisseurs will know what I am talking about. We are as well undergoing the construction of the world’s first covered all year grass polo facility. You can find more about this in the online shop on www.myaquechua.com or the A Quechua portal on www.myaquechua.com. Direct requests can be sent to info@aquechua.com.

The chukka timer displays the 7 minutes and 30 seconds in color for stopping the time yourself and has its own goal counter for quick and easy counting.
The course took place in the country’s elite riding centre in Jaipur, Rajasthan. Participants included some top players of the Indian national team, as well as several beginners who had not had much access to professional training before. The course was carried out by a team from the International Polo Academy comprising professional trainers and specialists. They were supported by a number of other polo experts, including employees from the company PoloCam which leads the world in the video analysis software Dartfish and the filming of polo matches.

The course included a thorough analysis of training sessions using the Dartfish technology. Another section of the course covered all elements to do with the game, from basic riding skills to performance on the playing field. As is standard for all IPA courses, players were taught conditioning programmes used for the Olympic Games. They were also given an insight into mental match preparation by IPA sports psychologist and IPA programme director Miranda Banks. Navjit Sandhu from the Indian Polo Association said, “The Indian Polo Association has grasped the initiative and familiarised our players with professional and internationally used training methods. With these efforts, we hope to reach a standard that will be internationally acceptable”.

The Argentinian coach Eduardo Amaya is part of the training team and is very impressed with the standard of the Indian players: “We can see lots of potential and real talent here. I’ve seen polo make huge advances within a short space of time in India. Realistically speaking, our players are capable of playing against the leading polo nations in the world”. Faiz Siddiqui (2), who took part in the intensive course as assistant coach to the Indian team, was also enthusiastic: “These ten days were the best investment I have ever made in my polo career.”

The intensive polo course was also a great success for the International Polo Academy. Charlie Froggatt outlined its importance: “India now has a reliable online TV platform that contains analyses of the capabilities of all 50 players who took part in the course, from sports psychology and fitness tests to riding skills, ball and hitting techniques to performance on the field. Thanks to this, the Indians now know what their strengths and weaknesses are and can improve these in a targeted way. The video platform gives us the opportunity to carry out remote training very effectively. It means that we use the analyses to set individually tailored exercises. This way of approaching things is trailblazing and more advanced than anything we have seen in polo before. It has enabled coaching to reach a new, scientific level.”
Javier Tanoira’s “Reflections on Argentinian Polo”, published in 2009, brings to mind the pithy observation of 18th century English poet Alexander Pope: “What oft was thought but ne’er so well expressed”. “Reflections” is a critical treatment of the disease that has befallen the highest echelons of polo, namely Argentinian high goal polo. It also contains suggestions as to how existing rules could be changed or brought back in their older form (before the era of “patron polo”) to recapture what the game has lost according to Tanoira.

And he is more than qualified to address this issue. At the peak of his career, he played with a handicap of 8 goals and took part in tournaments such as the British and US Open, as well as the Argentine Open in 2001. Born in 1971, he criticises problems with modern polo not from the viewpoint of an ageing warrior that looks back with nostalgia on glorious times, but on an equal level with players who continue to dominate the high goal game today.

Just as impressive is his origin: he is the son of Luisa Miguens de Tanoira, architect and author of “Passion & Glory: A Century of Argentine Polo” and Gonzalo Tanoira, a polo player who died in 2003, who was one of the best 10-goalers of his generation and President of the Argentine Polo Association (AAP) at the time of his passing. This book is required reading for all those who are of the opinion that polo has taken a negative turn. On around 90 pages, Tanoira pleads for a radical change in order to prevent his beloved game being consigned to history. In his book, he combines careful research with a passionate appeal to the Argentine polo community to support his endeavours.

Excerpt from the book: “In this country, which suffers from an evil that is endemic as well as chronic economic and political instability caused by corruption, where bribes are offered for votes and mistakes have been made in the state management of agriculture and livestock farming and where there is widespread poverty across the country, we have gold-dust in our hands in the form of a fun-

According to Tanoira, the biggest problem for the sport of polo is the deep-rooted mistrust of the polo community regarding changes. By way of comparison he cites the rules’ committee of Rugby Union. Under pressure of the television channels, the rules’ committee needs to stay dynamic; it had to hit from the defence line instead of having to return to the middle line for the throw-in. The AAP and Hurlingham Polo Association has already implemented some of his suggestions but the others will never see the light of day, such as his suggestion that Argentinian high goal players should play only on a limited number of polo ponies during the high goal season that are clearly identified and cannot be swapped. This would encourage players to use the power of their pony sparingly by focusing more on playing as a team. According to Tanoira, the deep-rooted mistrust of the polo community regarding changes is the biggest obstacle in trying to rescue polo from itself. In order to once again make polo a true spectator sport, he suggests that the “Rules of the Game Sub-Commnittee” by the AAP should be ratified to enable changes to be made. The committee, which is authorized to make changes to polo rules, comprises a dozen former players who are mostly 10-goalers and winners of the Argentine Open.

By way of comparison he cites the rules’ committee of Rugby Union, the British variation on football. Its governing body is the International Rugby Board (IRB) which represents almost 100 national rugby associations and achieved a turnover of 150 million dollars in the last Rugby World Cup in 2003. “The rugby boom worldwide as a spectacle coincided with the work done by this comnittee. Matches in European rugby leagues are broadcasted live by major sports channels and the IRB and its associations receive a huge amount of money for them. But the television channels also put them under pressure: they want a good show and everyone in the world of rugby understands this. As a result, the rules’ committee is flexible – because as soon as they implement a rule; the players find a way to circumvent it. Or to put it another way, they try to push the boundaries as much as possible and this often has a negative impact on the quality of the match. In rugby, continuous change is seen not only as a positive thing but also as a matter of course. Contrast this with polo – it would be a traumatic step to take and in some circumstances exacerbated by the conservative attitude that dominates polo. There are times in which you must dare to make changes to preserve what you have and I think this is such a time.” The view of a polo historian on Tanoira’s ‘Reflections’? What does Tanoira say to us in his ‘Reflections’? What contribution does he make with his book to the debates within the polo community that take place behind closed doors? Will patron polo determine how polo is played in the future? Or is there another way? I ask Dr Horacio Laffaye about this. But before I reveal what Laffaye thinks about “Reflections”, I’d just like to tell you a bit more about the polo historian. The native Argentinean with American citizenship has worked almost as a professional soci-ist for almost 50 years, 22 years of which he has been Professor of Surgery at Yale Medical School. Ten years he wrote the first of several polo histories, “The Polo Encyclopedia” (2004) and has also written contributions to the books “Profiles in Polo: The Players Who Changed the Game” (2008), “The Evolution of Polo” (2009), “Polo in England” (2010) and “Polo in the United States” (2011), which were all published by McFarland & Co. In spring 2014, the American publishers will also publish his book “Polo in Argentina: A History”. He grew up on a cattle ranch in the province of Buenos Aires and his brothers, uncles, father and local gauchos introduced him to polo at the age of six. In his foreword for “Polo in Argentina”, he explains: “I have had a lifelong love-affair with the game of polo as player, umpire, spectator or today as administrator and writer.” Together with his Argentinian wife Martha, played polo every weekend at the Fairfield Country Hunt Club for he moved to Southport, Connecticut in the late 1960s. There, he the polo historian Horacio Laffaye agrees with Javier Tanoira that the development of the sport of polo is not for the benefit of the spectators: "The lack of combination play has eroded much of the thrill of the game, for both spectators and participants alike." Laffaye describes Tanoira's "Reflections" as a "well-conceived dis- trict: the player holds his horse back in order to give an opponent enough space to cross his line of the ball. Unfortunately, today's players have made this artificial foul standard practice. These fouls are not only a nightmare for referees and disrupt the flow of the game, but they also affect the outcome of the match. Many goals are scored through penalties which has a negative impact on excellent goals scored as part of the match. One example in high goal polo is a match from the Argentine Open where 53 fouls were recorded. By contrast, only three penalties were called during the second game of the Cup of the Americas in 1950 at Palermo. Laffaye also supports Tanoira in his opposition to the throw-in: "With a throw-in, more damage is caused than in any other standard situation during the match. If the number of throw-ins was reduced, the flow and excitement of the match could be increased". This was one of the main aims of the Federation of International Polo (FIP) when it was founded thirty years ago: "to stan- dardize the rules of play and promote the game of polo on an international level". While these objectives were lofty, their attainment has been compromised by national self-interest and economic conditions. The development of a uniform rulebook has been hindered by the inflexibility of the three great powers, Argentina, England and the USA. But achieving uniform rules should be easy. Football is played across the world by millions of people according to the same rules. How can that not work with polo, given that it only has around 20,000 registered players around the globe? In practice, the "Big Three" control how the game is played around the world. The regulatory committees in all three nations do not have much interest in changing the status quo for various reasons. As they are at the top, the AAP sees no reason to change the rules. Both in the USA and the UK, polo is hindered by a concept called the "three man polo" concept, whereby the team comprises three professional players and a sponsor. There are no short term or long term plans to change because without "patron sponsorship" there would be no high goal polo outside Argentina. Neither Eng- land nor the USA are satisfied with their own rules and the USPA rules enable unlimited changes to team members during a match or tournament. They do not allow 30-yard penalties to be defen- ded and therefore make the match boring. The length and num- ber of changes varies and the way they finish also varies. A lot of constructive work needs to be done. Rules aside, some changes do not seem to focus on whether polo, the fastest team sport in the world, offers a good view for spectators or is a fun way for players to spend their time. The most notorious change was 2 points being awarded for a goal scored from 60 yards away. This practice only detracts from combination play and becomes an obsession with heavy hitters. This has a negative effect on team play. Polo is at a crossroads. It seems as though some regulatory committees have lost their way. There will always be amateur polo but the future of top players lies in the hands of professional institutions that are supported by commercial organisations. Javier Tanoira sounded the alarm with his book. The powers-that-be in polo should take a look at his book and bring polo back to its roots: it should be fun for players and an exciting event for spectators. Horace Laffaye is not just an important historian and worldwide spokesman for polo. Just like Tanoira, he is its conscience. He not supported by commercial organisations. Javier Tanoira sounded the alarm with his book. The powers-that-be in polo should take a look at his book and bring polo back to its roots: it should be fun for players and an exciting event for spectators. Horace Laffaye is not just an important historian and worldwide spokesman for polo. Just like Tanoira, he is its conscience. He not only draws our attention to what modern polo has achieved in 140 years, but also to the threat it is now facing. The regulatory autho- rities are handing over control to commercial interests that have other intentions in mind. All those who remember how polo once was before "patron polo" took a foothold should thank Tanoira and Laffaye for the fact that they have sounded the warning and shown ways to make polo a spectator sport once again.

DREAM YACHTS

The Italian Fipa Group is one of the world’s leading yacht manufacturers. The group, which is headquartered in Viareggio, Tuscany, is active worldwide and also a committed sponsor of polo.
Francesco Guidetti and his wife Mima Santucci founded the company Fipa Italiana Yachts in 1980, thereby laying the foundation stone for the international group today. The young company made a name for itself primarily with the first motor yachts made from fiberglass – the glass-reinforced plastic was an innovative material for most shipbuilders back then. In 1985, Fipa Italiana Yachts acquired the Maiora brand and expanded its product portfolio with a symbol of impressive craftsmanship and artistry. In the Fipa shipyards, the expertise of Maiora found itself on fertile ground and the prestigious brand became an innovative one with a quest for perfection. The purchase of the historic shipyard Intermare at the beginning of the 1990s gave the Fipa Group the opportunity to expand its services with specialized mechanical assistance, stainless steel works, teak works and docks for final sea trial before the final delivery to the client. At the beginning of the new millennium, the Fipa Group recognized in the shipyard AB Yachts a leader in the planning and construction of fast open motor yachts with water jets. With this acquisition, they began renewing models and widening production. Further to an increase in the market demand, Fipa Italiana Yachts moved part of the Maiora production to the Massa facilities. Another important development in the group’s history occurred in 2005 with the acquisition of the shipyard CBI Navi, where they inherited skills in the construction of metal yachts and enlarged the production areas in the Viareggio site with direct access to the sea. Its passion for yachts and quest for perfection are what has driven the Fipa Group right from the start. Today, the group is one of the world’s leading yacht manufacturers. The offer for boat experts ranges from fiberglass motor yachts up to 50 mt, to steel and light alloy motor yachts up to 80 mt, to open motor yachts up to 50 mt. The highest standards, best quality and perfect service are what characterize the Italian company. And it is not just speedy horsepower on water that the Fipa Group loves, but also animal horsepower on land. Since 2012 Fipa is sponsoring the sport of polo and among other things hosts the Viareggio Polo Beach Cup in their home country. Furthermore Fipa supports the Hublot Polo Cup Ascona, the Tianjin Goldin Metropolitan Polo Club in China, the Palm Beach Polo Club in Wellington / USA and the Royal Jaipur Polo Club in India. Next year the commitment is meant to be extended and the collaboration with Wellington and the Polo Club Saint-Tropez is meant to be intensified. Rudolf Berglehner: “The tournaments are the perfect platform for us to get to know our customers personally. The world of polo is marked by understatement and we really like that. We do not like to show off as well. But we have very special yachts in limited production for special customers and we offer a very personal service along with it. Polo is a gigantic sport with gorgeous horses which understand the game. Intelligence, speed, skills and beauty of the animals are united at the polo field – and this is the way we construct our yachts.”

CHEVAL DES ANDES

Polo and wine are inspiring his life: in Mendoza/Argentina the French Nicolas Audebert combines his talents and passions surrounded by the terrific setting of the Andes.

polo at Cheval des Andes is familiar, well Essay. Nicolas calls it homemade polo because it is practiced at Cheval des Andes own polo field with people he trusts and without formalities.

Everyday work in the vineyards with the horses and in the cellar.
A polo field amidst infinite vineyards, on the horizon the snow-covered Andes Mountains rise up to the sky. Here in Mendoza the Frenchman Nicolas Audebert has found a slice of heaven as a winemaker and polo player. The vineyard estate Cheval des Andes is located in Las Compuertas District which is one of the most prestigious and renowned regions of Luján de Cuyo in Mendoza. Here, the Grand Cru of the Andes’ vines grow on a 125-acre field – a remarkable wine, which right now starts an international triumph. The pioneering joint venture between Chateau Cheval Blanc and Terrazas de los Andes is run by Nicolas Audebert. He works as a full-time winemaker for the alliance – working closely with Pierre Lurton, Winemaker of Chateau Cheval Blanc – and is charged with all aspects of winemaking. In this role, Nicolas leverages his world-class training in the French art of assemblage with a hands-on appreciation for the ideal elevation vineyards of Mendoza, Argentina, for seven years. Nicolas Audebert is not only very successful as an oenologist, he also participates in tournaments with his Cheval des Andes polo team. "Polo at Cheval des Andes is part of our passion; we call it homemade polo because we practice it at our own polo field with people we trust and without formalities. We handle ourselves with care of every single detail. We play with two teams, the players are close friends, some of whom are professionals and the rest (including myself and Cheval des Andes Head of viticulture – Gustavo Urcosmar) are just bon vivant, wine and polo fanatics. We have international guest players once in a while joining us in our trainings and friendly matches, who add a lot of value to our games (expertise and fun). They visit us especially during November and December – spring-summer time in the Southern Hemisphere – when all the important international matches happen in Argentina as Tortugas, Hurlingham and Palermo. Our goal is to make our guests enjoy the real Mendocean lifestyle, submerged in its terroir and surrounded by the Cordillera de los Andes including the polo experience and the best food and wine."

Combining a beautifully restored neo-Renaissance façade with cutting-edge interiors, this hotel has a rich history and is also home to a permanent art exhibition by the Argentinian art collective Mondongo. It is a perfect boutique hotel, located in the heart of exciting Buenos Aires. Strategically situated in the famous and traditional district of San Martín y Córdoba, the Esplendor Hotel Buenos Aires is an authentic urban spot that links the city’s various different tourist attractions: the Microcentro, Puerto Madero, Corrientes Avenue, Retiro and Santa Fé Avenue. The hotel is located adjacent to the famous shopping mall Galerías Pacifico and the lively Florida Street and was originally designed by architects Agrello and Le Vacher in 1889. It was one of the first hotels in Buenos Aires and the absolute favourite of English immigrants. Remodelled in 2005, it has retained its original character but now has a modern interior, meaning that the architectural interior is completely different to the exterior façade. A minimalist vertical structure was designed with the antique patios of the hotel acting as a centrepiece.

Inside the rooms, a wide range of innovative and interesting materials has been used. Designed by the renowned Argentinian designer Martin Churba for his label Tramando, they cover everything from the headboards of the bed to the pillows and even the lamps.

The very singular works of art from the art collective Mondongo decorate the hallways of Esplendor with contrasting and divergent materials ranging from play dough, cookies, threads, nails, crystals and even gold chains. Between these works are images of famous Argentine figures from the country’s popular culture, such as Maradona, Gardel, Piazzolla, Evita and Borges.

This avant-garde hotel also offers several amenities, such as beauty treatments and massage therapists in your own room, a fully-equipped gym, playroom, business centre and the very attractive Mott Bar is a different choice for night and day. A minimalist vertical structure was designed with the antique patios of the hotel acting as a centrepiece.

The magic of the Orient surrounds guests at the Royal Mansour. The 35,000 square metre complex in the centre of Marrakech’s old town replicates the construction styles used in ancient Moroccan cities and is largely integrated into the city walls. Splendid and imposing, the exclusive hotel embodies traditional Moroccan lifestyle in an artistic manner. Traditional architecture and craftsmanship go hand-in-hand with a new kind of luxury and unique service.

Guests stay in fully equipped private villas. 53 of these so-called riads with a size of 130-850 square metres are spread out across the complex. The riads are in the style of a traditional Moroccan home, with the rooms distributed across three floors. All riads have a private courtyard, their own pool on the roof terrace and a personal butler. The architectural style of the villas is traditionally oriental and completed by the lush gardens and typical Moroccan wells and waterfalls. All decorative elements and mosaics in the palace-like complex have been handmade in great detail by workers from the royal household. The Royal Mansour is a project by the King of Morocco Mohammed VI and does not just represent luxury of the highest level, but also a maximum of privacy. An underground service city has been established for discreet and optimal handling of all service processes.

Three exclusive restaurants managed by Michelin starred French chef Yannick Alleno, including a traditional Moroccan and a French restaurant, promise culinary enjoyment. The authentic Moroccan wellness and spa facility is an oasis of calm in the middle of the bustling Marrakech medina. The luxurious Moroccan spa is located in the middle of the idyllic hotel garden and comprises 2500 square metres, including a hammam, pool, fitness studio, tea salon to relax in and private cabins for individual and comprehensive beauty treatments. The design of the whole spa appeals because of high-quality materials, colour-coordinated mosaic tiles and handmade woodwork and inlays. Lighting, steam, water and music effects transform the rooms into a refuge for the senses.
